60-Second Civics Airs 500th Episode on Election Day

Center for Civic Education's daily broadcast focuses on civics and government

CALABASAS, Calif.— 60-Second Civics, the daily podcast of the Center for Civic Education, celebrates its 500th episode this Election Day. The recordings provide a concise primer on civics, giving listeners a quick and convenient way to learn about the nation's government, Constitution, and history.

The podcast content comes from the Center's curricula, including We the People: The Citizen & the Constitution, Project Citizen, Foundations of Democracy, and Elements of Democracy. Educators use 60-Second Civics and the accompanying Daily Civics Quiz to teach students about the ideas and people behind the basic principles of the nation's constitutional government.

The 500th podcast looks at Brown v. Board of Education, the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court case where the justices declared unanimously that separate educational facilities are "inherently unequal." The current episode—and an archive of all podcasts—can be found at <http://new.civiced.org/resources/multimedia/60-second-civics>.
